NIH Public Access Update: Clarifying Use of the NIH Manuscript Submission Reference Number (NIHMSID)

The NIH Public Access Policy ensures that the public has access to published results of NIH-funded research. Awardees are required to provide NIH with evidence of compliance for applicable papers that are authored by the principal investigator (PI) or that arise from the PI’s NIH-funded research.

The NIH Manuscript Submission Reference Number (NIHMSID) may be used to demonstrate compliance on NIH applications, proposals, or reports, for up to three months after a paper is published. Three or more months after publication, a PubMed Central® reference number (PMCID) must be provided. Only the PMCID signifies that all steps of the NIH Public Access submission process are complete and that the paper is ready for posting at PubMed Central.

Why buy our bottle over a metal bottle? Sigg metal water bottles made prior to August 2008 have BPA in the liner of the bottles.

Go Green Tote Bags & Bottles Still for Sale
The $5 BPA-free water bottles, along with the $3 large-capacity bags are on sale. A portion of the proceeds will go towards a new water filtration system for the DSB and also additional recycling containers for the college. Contact Whitney Dunn or Will McBride if you wish to purchase a bag or bottle. You may also contact Nancy Slach, who has some bags and bottles in her office (S447). Both the bottle and bag would make great holiday gifts!
