Drs. John Warren, David Drake and Marcia Willing Receive $349,755 Carver Grant

Dr. John Warren, Preventive & Community; Dr. David Drake, Endodontics and Dows; and Dr. Marcia Willing, College of Medicine, have received a two-year $349,755 grant from the Roy J. Carver Charitable Trust. The grant will support the Muscatine Pediatric Dental Clinic Project – Research & Improvements to Better Understand and Treat Dental Caries for Muscatine Children. Their research will allow investigators to more thoroughly understand the dental caries process in young children and will provide the necessary link between previous research and a future comprehensive grant application to the National Institutes of Health (NIH). Specifically, the research component will collect and analyze microflora, genetic, dietary, fluoride exposure, and visible plaque data, as well as detailed dental caries examination data from pre-school children attending the Muscatine Pediatric Dental Clinic. Half of the funding will include support for upgrades to this clinic (replacing current portable equipment with more standard dental operatories, etc.) so the clinic will better serve the children of the Muscatine area. The remaining portion of the funding will support collection and analysis of caries data from clinic children, and also support some analyses of data obtained from the NIH WIC-based study.

Drs. Warren, Drake and Willing are co-principal investigators. Investigators include Dr. Deborah Dawson, Preventive & Community and collegiate director of biostatistics; Dr. Richard Burke, Pediatric Dentistry and director of the Muscatine Pediatric Dental Clinic; Dr. Teresa Marshall, Preventive & Community; Dr. Andrew Lidral, Orthodontics; Dr. Michael Kanellis, Dental Clinic Administration; and Dr. Steven Levy, Preventive & Community.

Dr. Thaddeus Stappenbeck studies the role and regulation of intestinal epithelial stem cells in health and disease. Common disorders and diseases, including irritable bowel syndrome and colon cancer, target these cells and affect their repair, regeneration and transformation. The goal of Dr. Stappenbeck’s research is to identify their molecular properties and determine their interaction with the surrounding mesenchymal stem cell niche. In one current project, he is investigating the molecular nature of the macrophage-stem cell interaction. In another project, he is studying new markers of intestinal epithelial stem cells using the novel genes identified through sequencing micro-cDNA libraries of LCM procured progenitors.
